The Lost Child

- It was spring time and the people in colourful attire were going to the fair.
- A Child along with his parents was going to the fair and was very excited & happy.

The Lost Child

- The child was fascinated by the stalls of toys and sweets. Though his father got angry, but his mother pacified him and diverted his attention towards other things.

The Lost Child

- The child moved forward but once again lagged behind because his eyes were caught by one thing or the other every now & then.

The Lost Child

- As they moved forward, the child got demurred by the decorative items on the stalls. His mouth watered, seeing sweets decorated with gold and silver leaves.
- “I want burfi” but he did not wait for his parents’ reply as he knew very well that his parents will never agree to buy burfi for him.
- They would say, he was greedy, therefore he kept moving.

The Lost Child

- Then he witnessed beautiful garlands but didn't ask for it.
- Then he saw balloons, but he knew very well that his parents will say that he was too old to play with balloons, so he walked away.
- Then he saw a snake charmer, a roundabout swing.

The Lost Child

The Lost Child

- Now he stopped to ask his parents the permission to enjoy the swing but to his utter surprise, there was no reply.
- Neither his father, nor his mother was there.
- Now the child realized that he was lost.
- He ran here and there but with no fruitful result.

The Lost Child

- He ran here and there but with no fruitful result. The place was too overcrowded. He got terrified.

The Lost Child

- Suddenly a kind hearted man took him up in his arms and tried to console him. He asked him if he would like to have a joy ride. But the child sobbed, “I want my father, I want my mother”.

The Lost Child

- The man offered him sweets, balloons and garland. But the child kept on sobbing, “I want my father, I want my mother”.
